Thank you. A: Assuming you are using GNU sed `sed -n's/^(\n\|^\s*)\s*/\n/p' file` The `-n` flag makes the default action of printing the pattern space, which in this case is empty. So the first print is empty as well. But after processing the first line, the second line is not empty. If the empty lines are between the two lines with text in them, you will need to change the matching lines to include any previous empty lines. Since your post does not show us a snippet of the file, I can not test this. But hopefully you can use the sed knowledge to adjust this. Trees, shrubs and other plants from the mountains of the Sierra Nevada to the deserts of the Mojave, California's trees, shrubs and other plants include nonvascular plants, vascular plants and animals. While they are the smallest of our plant species, trees, shrubs and other woody plants are among the most beneficial, providing shelter, food, nutrients and other important ecosystem services. These trees, shrubs and other woody plants play a crucial role in cleaning water, reducing pollution, providing food and shelter, and shaping landscapes. Why are trees, shrubs and other woody plants so important? The oceans cover more than 70 percent of Earth's surface, but they are not inert and uninhabitable. Every day, they absorb three times as much carbon dioxide as the atmosphere can safely hold. For every ton of carbon dioxide absorbed, the oceans naturally release approximately a ton of carbon dioxide back to the atmosphere. Trees, shrubs and other woody plants are the world's largest carbon sinks. By absorbing and storing carbon dioxide from the atmosphere, trees, shrubs and other woody plants help to regulate Earth's climate and limit the effects of climate change. In addition, forests and other woodlands provide important habitat for wildlife and other forms of life. Trees, shrubs and other woody 82157476af
